

Jiva Ayurveda, Gargi College to launch Ayurveda and Yoga course

The launch of the course in Gargi College is part of Jiva Ayurveda's ongoing initiative to propagate the knowledge of Ayurveda across the world.

The Department of Chemistry of Gargi College under Delhi University in association with Jiva Ayurveda has introduced an add-on course 'Ayurveda and Yoga – The Science of Well-being' for its students. The six months' course will introduce students to several principles of Ayurveda and Yoga.

The course will be covered under four sections – Basics of Ayurveda, Nutrition, Beauty and Fighting common health problems. During the course, the students will learn about different body types (Prakriti), principles of healthy living, concepts of nutrition, principles of Ayurvedic cooking, tips to prevent common diseases, how to attain healthy womanhood, home remedies for common gynaecological problems, Ayurvedic steps to enhance inner and external beauty, among others.

Speaking on the launch of the course, Dr Partap Chauhan, Director, Jiva Ayurveda said, "Ayurveda is not only for aged people. With Ayurveda our youth can stay healthy and beautiful. Women, in their various roles as mother, daughter and sister – are very influential in a family, so when they learn Ayurveda, the entire family benefits from the knowledge. I congratulate the management of Gargi College and Principal Dr (Mrs) Promila Kumar on this initiative to teach Ayurveda to the next generation of young Indians."

The launch of the course in Gargi College is part of Jiva Ayurveda's ongoing initiative to propagate the knowledge of Ayurveda across the world. At present, Jiva Ayurveda teaches Ayurveda in Japan, France and Poland in addition to conducting regular educational workshops across the world.

Dr Geeta Saini and Dr Neha Sharma convened the course and the course material was developed by a team of senior doctors under the guidance of Dr Partap Chauhan. The course will be taught by senior Jiva Ayurveda doctors.
